PERSONAL PROFILE:

KIRAN SINGH SIRAH is an award-winning Storyteller, Folklorist, Arts & Culture Creative Thought Leader, Artist, and Past President of the International Storytelling Center. For more than two decades, Kiran has established award-winning arts, cultural and human rights initiatives in numerous countries. These programs have received recognition from UNESCO, The White House, The United Nations, and the European Commission. He has spoken at the Library of Congress, the Kennedy Center, American Public Health Association, US Senate Foreign Relations Committee, The Pentagon, The US State Department, and numerous World Peace, Arts, and Culture assemblies.

In 2015, he was invited to the White House in support of storytelling efforts for national grassroots peacebuilding efforts. An advisory member to UNESCO Scotland and a Rotary World Peace Fellow, he has developed articles, toolkits, and talks on interdisciplinary storytelling and creative approaches to relationship building in communities around the globe. Kiran has been a thought leader on projects with the Smithsonian, League of American Orchestras, Google Arts & Culture, Dollywood, Desmond Tutu Peace Foundation, The British Council, American Folklore Society, Library of Congress, South Arts, NASA, National Endowments for Arts & Humanities, and special arts & peacebuilding collaborations by invitation of Yo-Yo Ma and Dolly Parton.

Kiran passionately believes in the power of human creativity, arts, storytelling, and the notion of a truly global multicultural society. In 2017, he was one seven people worldwide selected to receive the “Champion of Peace” award at Rotary International Day at the United Nations in Geneva and was recently nominated for his work to receive a National Education Association Martin Luther King Jr. Human Rights and Civil Rights award.

Kiran also serves in advisory roles in numerous professional organizations including, Senior Fellow for the Alliance for Peacebuilding, USA Ambassador for Generations for Peace, Executive Board of American Folklore Society, Collective Impact Leadership Council of STRONG ACC, East Tennessee Foundation, Advisory Network UNESCO Scotland, and New York City’s City Lore Project. Previously, Kiran served with Tennesseans for the Arts, the International Storytelling Center, The Association of American Cultures, African and Caribbean Network (Scotland), and Scottish Refugee Week.

President, International Storytelling Center (ISC)- Arts, Humanities, and Educational Non-Profit). Jonesborough, TN; August 2013 - June 2023

Kiran dedicated a decade to advancing ISC as the global flagship for storytelling through expanding the definition of storytelling, highlighting marginalized and underrepresented narratives, celebrating unsung heroes, increasing accessibility to storytelling for all, for families, and promoting storytelling as a tool for peace and social inclusion. Overseeing 111 jobs, and an annual economic impact of 8 million dollars. In his time, he also brought significant cultural, operational direction, financial stability and growth to ISC (transforming the institution from Chapter 11 bankruptcy to a thriving global institution) and developed a variety of values focused innovative new programs including Freedom Stories, Stories as Medicine, Appalachian Youth Story Summit, the More than One Story Initiative, while also steering the National Storytelling Festival through to its 50th anniversary, as the leading festival of its kind in the world. Through his work, ISC has received recognition and major funding from the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities, Purdue, the Mellon Foundation, South Arts, New Pluralists Collective, Rockefeller Philanthropies, Omidyar Group, Acton Family Giving, East Tennessee Foundation, and led the institution to become among the top rank of Major Cultural Institutions (MCI) for the state of Tennessee. Kiran has represented ISC at numerous world peace and national assemblies and developed partnerships with major cultural institutions including the Smithsonian, the United Nations, the Library of Congress, American Public Health Association, Google Arts & Culture, Dollywood, and Dolly Parton's Imagination Library. In 2017, he was honored as a "Champion of Peace" at Rotary International Day at the United Nations for advancing storytelling for world peace and invited to develop storytelling and healing programs with the City of Charleston following the 2015 massacre at "Mother" Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church. He has collaborated and been invited as a creative thought leader with Yo-Yo Ma and Dolly Parton, on amplifying Appalachian traditions, and educational programs. He has used story methods in advocacy and coalition building for a bipartisan peace initiative at the US Senate, which became US law, known as the Elie Wiesel Genocide and Mass Atrocities Prevention Act. Fellow, Rotary Peace Fellowship: UNC/Duke Chapel Hill, NC; Duke University Certificate in international peace and conflict resolution/conflict prevention. 2011-2013

Masters Fellowship at the University of North Carolina's Department of American Studies Folklore, combined with international peace and conflict resolution/conflict prevention. Research focusing on "Aesthetics of Home through Narratives, Memory, and the Arts" emphasizing the power of human creativity; finding a sense of home. Thesis: A Stone in the Brook. Kiran was one of ten people worldwide selected to this fellowship for advancing the arts for social change and peacebuilding in the world.

Arts Manager, Sense Scotland Glasgow, Scotland; 2009-2011

Managed the Helen Keller International Arts Award exhibition and program including 120 artists from 26 supporting countries; led and managed a national team, developed international arts and communications programs supporting people with complex and diverse dual disabilities. Kiran established formal UNESCO recognition for Sense Scotland's arts & disability center, Touchbase, as part of UNESCO Creative Cities and oversaw all the national Arts & Health, Drama, Performing Arts and Music programming and numerous Creative Scotland artist commissions. Kiran also wrote for Deaf Blind International (DBI) publications and advocated for the rights and inclusion of artists with disabilities, as part of mainstream arts recognition.

Learning Curator, Glasgow Museums, Scotland; 2002-2009

Served as Learning Curator with primary responsibilities for St. Mungo Museum of Religious Life & Art, Kelvingrove 21st Century Refurbishment Project, Gallery of Modern Art, and Glasgow People's Palace Museum of Social History. Also held responsibilities to develop city-wide social justice and inclusion initiatives across 13 museums, 40 libraries, and community health initiatives, that served a population of 3 million people.

Glasgow Museum Learning Curator Project Examples:

- Arts for Social Change. In 2002, Kiran became the first Learning Curator of St Mungo Museum of Religious Life and Art in Glasgow, the UK's only museum of religion. Kiran established and built an award-winning national program and developed a city-wide arts action plans to establish Scotland's first museum citizenship and understanding sectarianism heritage project. At that time, Scotland had few resources in which to understand this subject fully, which was politically challenging to do so. It included building relationships across the Christian denominations, including Protestant societies such as The Orange Order and Roman Catholic run Republican groups, such as The Hibernian Lodges. As well as programs with diverse group of artists, poets and musicians and cross border community relations from across the divided communities within Scotland and Northern Ireland. Kiran built a 'Societies Emerging from Conflict' partnership with Ulster Museum, in Belfast, which used museum objects, and stories by people affected by the sectarian 'troubles'. Projects included empowering community leaders, people of diverse faith traditions, dialogues with ex-paramilitary members, elected officials, as well as football 'old firm' supporters and territorial gang members, to collect stories, songs, and sectarian related objects. Examples include poetry written on prison-issued toilet tissue by Republican hunger striker Bobby Sands as well as sectarian 'football songs' that related to Protestant 'hero' King William of Orange. This program went on to become one of the largest and most successful programs of its type in the UK and Ireland. It received recognition from both The Scottish Government and The Northern Ireland Assembly to which around 100,000 people across communities have since participated. The program supported cross political dialogues, from Scotland and Northern Ireland, and, by invitation of the European Commission was shared as a model of practice with counterparts from Palestine, Israel, The Middle East and North Africa. The programs established around 70 creative partnerships, dialogues between youth gangs and the police, restorative justice and more. As a result, Kiran was invited to be the City of Glasgow's representative in a twinning program with the City of Marseilles, France, as part of the 2007 European year of International Dialogue.

- Exploring Contemporary Issues. In the lead-up to the 2007 bi-centenary commemorations of the abolition of the British slave trade, Kiran initiated a city-wide coordinated response to marking this important and significant year which came to be known as "Towards Understanding Slavery: Past and Present". It included relationships and research with Scotland's African diaspora community, people of different faith traditions, artists, poets and musicians. This led to the development of a series of community exhibitions and public programs that used objects from museum collections historically collected and interpreted through only western institutional Euro-centric structures. An 'African Voices' program sought to challenge colonial legacies by reinterpreting these objects through first- person narratives of artists from Scotland's 'new communities', encouraged the relinquishing of institutional control and empowering diverse interpretations of the aesthetics of cultural property. This work challenged the idea of 'static' culture and utilized contemporary traditions drawn from African and Caribbean folk traditions, including a Glasgow Haitian Voodoo alter, a Rastafari reggae sound system, and the commissioning of new contemporary art works for the museum collections on themes of 'products of slavery' by working with artists of mixed British and African Caribbean heritage.

Education Officer, National Museums Scotland, 2001-2002

Established 'Side by Side: A Celebration of World Faiths in Scotland,' a national post-9/11 educational interfaith public folklife festival and dialogue program, in partnership with Scotland's diverse faith communities. The first event took place 6 months after 9/11 and invited around 6000 people of Scotland diverse faiths and traditions, to share stories, objects, and participate in an Understanding Scotland's Faith Traditions, program series. Six museum handling kits were created in collaboration with six major religions (Islam, Buddhism, Sikhism, Hinduism, Christianity, Judaism) communities and established a multiply museum and places of worship school visits program.

Around 1500 participants were in attendance representing both small and large orchestras. 2020

- Initiated Freedom Stories: Unearthing the Black Heritage of Appalachia, initiative. Following the murder of George Floyd, Kiran wanted to go beyond just issuing a statement but to create a program that served the community at a time of need and during this critical moment, when people had a right to talk about what's on their minds. The program, 'Do Black Lives Matter in Appalachia?' emerged as the first public event of that program, which launched on July 3, 2020. It brought together Black activist youth, scholars, historians, community leaders, and artists to discuss topics such as "race bias in education," "the continual struggle for civil rights," "Jim Crow Appalachia; slavery by another name" and aspirations for a more just and equal community. Over 12,000 people attended that first virtual event and it has since reached around 1.5 million people worldwide through a free multimedia co-owned community resource for dozens of Black cultural and community organizations. The program culminated in a cross partisan congressional briefing and has been received exemplary recognition for its depth and innovation by organizations such as National Humanities Alliance, and the National Endowment for the Humanities. 2019-2021.

- Keynote, Design Thinking and Facilitation at Mother Emanuel AME Church. Invited to lead a Storytelling and Healing program in Charleston, South Carolina, following the deadly shooting at Mother Emanuel AME Church--which took nine parishioners' lives. This was part of a series of events aimed at fostering healing and community dialogue. It included an official storytelling proclamation of friendship between two southern cities, a round table to discuss contested symbols, a private social change capacity conversation with educators and artists, and an empowerment workshop for students from the only inner-city high school in Charleston, Burke High School. 2016. This project is discussed in Kiran's 2016 A TEDx Talk Storytelling: A Peaceful Power.

- Provided Partnership Facilitation with Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs. Developed US State Department partnership via its Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs (ECA) and Institute for Contemporary Education and the Dialogue Institute. The project brought 20 youth leaders from Egypt, Lebanon, Turkey, and Iraq to Cherokee, North Carolina. Kiran cooked a traditional Indian "halal" meal for all the participants and led the fellows in a deep dive story exploration to help them make sense of their experiences and cultivate the stories they wished to foster relationships with one another, their respected communities, and in building relations between their home nations and the US. A follow up storytelling meeting was arranged at the US State building in DC in which Kiran led and advised on a series of global storytelling pilot programs for 50 global nations in collaboration with US embassies. 2016.
- Building Dolly Parton's First Resort. A Storytelling Site of Excellence. Kiran initiated, led and established a unique Arts and Culture partnership with Dollywood. Kiran's expertise helped Dollywood's Dream More realize Dolly's vision of using storytelling arts to bring families together—help tell Dolly's story more broadly. As Dolly Parton's first resort hotel, the envisioning took place prior to the resort's official opening in 2015, to ensure story concepts were embedded in the design from the outset, to include shared values, family philosophies and mutual commitment to cultural preservation, regional development, and promoting positive change to bring families together. The new resort now includes multigenerational storytelling traditions, training, performances, a festival and other special activity. Kiran envisioned a site of storytelling seal of excellence, for the new resort- and a multi-arts family festival for artists, songwriters, and storytelling performers. Kiran also received a personal thank you letter and flowers from Ms. Dolly Parton and an invitation to a special event hosted by Ms. Parton. 2015

TESTIMONIALS:

“Kiran understands at a very deep level that art not only holds intrinsic value but is a powerful tool for social change. I have seen him link poetry, storytelling and photography with issues as diverse as gang warfare, human trafficking, peacebuilding, and countering violent extremism. This ability to link disparate world views and modalities for peace is extremely rare, and Kiran is a genius in this regard. His ability to link different cultures, his brilliant ingenuity, his vast creativity, his love for a wide range of storytelling traditions – and his modesty -- strike me as the values we desperately need during a polarizing and traumatic time in the world. Kiran is a once-in-a-generation social leader” - Melanie Greenberg, Managing Director, Peacebuilding, Humanity United. Omidyar Group.

“Kiran is an exceptional individual that has led outstanding arts and humanities projects towards collective impact. By scaling up his Storytelling for All approach to ensure equity, diversity and critical conversations are core to the arts, and public discourse at large. Kiran is constantly working for social change, whether he’s training troops in using storytelling for non-violence conflict prevention strategy at the Pentagon or empowering grassroots student activists across the US South to share stories on their own terms. His goal is always to amplify the voices and stories of America’s most historically marginalized groups and help advance multiculturalism as a foundational core value for our nation. Kiran brings a mastery and unique expertise to the field of storytelling and narrative change for the benefit of the wider American public, where his accomplishments are undeniably far above what is expected from his peer group. Although newer to our nation, he has established himself as a national leader, an interdisciplinary specialist, a public folklorist and educator, whom is always creating important national dialogue collaborations across the United States, and beyond.” – Dr. William Ferris. Joel R. Williamson Eminent Professor of History. Senior Associate Director. Center for Study of the American South. Former Chair of the National Endowment for Humanities.

*“Kiran’s work building community and cross-cultural constructive ties among people through their most cherished and meaningful cultural assets is much needed in our globalized societies, in search of a creative, peaceful future. I applaud him for his talent, devotion, innovation, and energy in service of his cause—the cause of all of us.” --Dr. Daniel Sheehy, Director Emeritus, Smithsonian Center for Folklife & Cultural Heritage

“Kiran’s contributions explore culturally diverse approaches through working with communities affected by conflict and marginalization.” - Joanne Orr, Chair of UK National Commission, UNESCO Scotland Committee

*“Compared to other education and public relations professionals whom I have worked with, Kiran Sirah has a sharp instinct for presenting complex information from a relatable and fresh perspective.” --Dr. Alice Wessen, Public Engagement Manager, NASA Jet Propulsion Laboratory

“Kiran has already made an enormous impact, both in the United Kingdom and since 2011, in the United States, and he will continue to do so. On November 3rd, 2012, Kiran was invited by the Rotary International Representative to the United Nations to deliver a keynote address to discuss his work and ideas for using the arts as a force for social change. He spoke to an audience of more than 1,300 Rotarians, United Nations officials and representatives from worldwide international development organizations in the immediate aftermath of Hurricane Sandy. During the two days before his keynote address, Kiran walked all over the city, listening to stories of residents’ experiences with the storm, which led him to dedicate his speech “to the people of the city who took me in and offered inspiration, truly Telling Stories that Matter”. - Susan E. Carroll Managing Director. The Duke-UNC Rotary Peace Center.

“Through the story arts, he has been able to break down barriers, heal hearts and improve the human condition. Working with teachers, he supports the use stories to fuel the imaginations of students and build their self-image and self-determination. He is firmly on building community. I don’t believe there is any element of our society that Kiran could not- and would not- face for the purpose of bringing peace and well-being to our world. His gentle and caring spirit fills all the space around him. Being with Kiran is both inspiring and soothing. He has a calming and peaceful nature putting you at ease and making a space for open and meaningful dialogue. Through our work at the Niswonger Foundation, Kiran has provided support for our college leadership program, for the educators across the region, for school children, and to me, personally, as a mentor and friend. Kiran is the very definition of nonviolent activism. He doesn’t shy away from the hard questions. He merely uses his tremendous talents to share life lessons peacefully, respectfully, and convincingly. I want to keep learning from him.” –Dr. Nancy Dishner, President and CEO, Niswonger Foundation.

“He is a true leader in advancing the role of storytelling in our nation’s historical and cultural research. I was a first-hand witness to Mr. Sirah’s approach to his craft. Many social scientists may view it as an intellectual exercise, but Mr. Sirah sees the connections between storytelling and real-world social issues with unusual clarity. He uses it as a tool to build empathy, defuse painful divisions, and construct a more peaceful world. Mr. Sirah’s work is directly relevant to some of the United States’ most urgent national interests today. A country that is in severe need of increased cross-cultural compassion and awareness should take heed of the potential contributions of Mr. Sirah.” --Harold Closter. Director [former] of Smithsonian Affiliates.

“With his background in the arts as well as an ability to teach effectively, Kiran gives individuals and communities new ways to approach collaborative efforts aimed at conflict resolution on any level.” - Rebecca Popham, Desmond Tutu Peace Foundation-USA

“Kiran Sirah is an exceptional individual who brings a broad background and a true mastery to the field of storytelling. Kiran Sirah’s significant accomplishments have enjoyed widespread acceptance and implementation by the storytelling community and are undeniably far above what is expected from his peer group and have established him as a nationally and internationally outstanding researcher in his field. His work is certainly important to the field and to the United States” --Congressman [Former] Phil Roe. 1st district, Tennessee. (a sponsor for Kiran’s 2016 exceptional ability Greencard)

In my career, talent like Mr. Kiran Sirah’s is difficult to find, both in terms of professional practice and in terms of theoretical understanding.” -- David Stanley, Protocol Officer, U.S. Army Maneuver Center of Excellence. Fort Benning, GA

He gave an outstanding talk about the power of stories for community building and peacemaking.” - Nicole Saylor, Head of the Archive, American Folklife Center, Library of Congress

“Kiran brought a fresh, creative energy to our team and helped us to think about creative storytelling in new ways. The toolkit he developed while he was with us continues to be a useful resource for the global network of Partners all over the world.” --Julia Roig, President, Partners for Democratic Change

"We have engaged the work and expertise of Mr. Sirah to enable our fellows' experiences to focus on developing personal narratives that promote the core values of our program in particular to advance comprehension of democracy and religious liberty as core values in the United States" -- Barbara Zasloff, Ph.D., President. International Center for Contemporary Education

"Kiran's scope of work and influence are not limited to Tennessee. He recently received a call from the White House asking him to speak about response to recent tragic events through storytelling. Calls like this across the country and the world are not uncommon for Kiran as he is a known leader in his field of professional storytelling, expertly communicating its impact on community development, social justice, and peace. Kiran Sirah's brilliance in purpose, message, and action is a gift to Tennessee and our country. His accomplishments and impact are unique and significant and his work propels him toward his personal goal of peace in the world." - Stephanie B. Conner. Immediate Past Chair. Tennessee Arts Commission.

"Kiran is one of those thinkers whose ideas often seem, at first glance, brilliantly outside of the box; on closer examination, however, one realizes that they're not so much outside of the box as busily re-framing the box, re-conceptualizing possibilities in strikingly original ways. What emerges is not necessarily what one expects, but instead what one couldn't even have imagined . . . but which seems to make complete sense once it's in place." -Dr. Glenn Hinson, Acting Director, Folklore Program, University of North Carolina

"Kiran is truly an expert in the field of professional storytelling." --Dr. Brian Noland, President, East Tennessee State University

"He is very creative and accomplished in a variety of visual and performing arts and uses these talents to facilitate the expression of identity by marginalized and troubled communities for which he demonstrates compassion and understanding. His work has shown the value of the arts in bringing together communities in conflict, promoting mutual understanding that lays a foundation for conflict resolution. Most important is that Kiran has the will and an abundance of charm needed to inspire others to support him in positive actions towards these ends." --Frank Webb, D.Phil. Professor of the Practice of Public Policy, Duke Center for International Development, Sanford School of Public Policy, Duke University

"Kiran's commitment to thoughtful dialogue, connecting people across difference and conflict, and creating transformative educational experiences is exceptional, and I am grateful to have had the opportunity to work with and learn from him." --Emily Chavez, Outreach, The Consortium in Latin American and Caribbean Studies at UNC-Chapel Hill and Duke University

"Kiran embodies the transformative power of storytelling. A mosaic of cultural influences have shaped his identity, and his journey from a multicultural upbringing to becoming a global advocate for using stories as bridges for peace and understanding is truly awe-inspiring. From childhood lessons in resilience to empowering marginalized communities, Kiran's life is a testament to the potency of narratives in healing, connecting, and fostering change. His work as a Rotary Peace Fellow, his successful ten-year leadership tenure at the International Storytelling Center, and his involvement in pioneering initiatives like Freedom Stories exemplify his dedication to social justice and community empowerment. Kiran's passion for global peace through storytelling is both palpable and impactful. Every day he illuminates a path toward a more interconnected and empathetic world. We need leaders like Kiran now more than ever”- Mark Cruise- Health and Social Impact Leader, Innovator and Advocate.

Kiran is a master storyteller and a dynamic facilitator whose work brings people together across lines of difference in pursuit of a more just and peaceful world. I've been involved in storytelling for social change projects around the world for the past 15 years and I have yet to meet someone as skilled and passionate as Kiran in this work- Dr. William McInerney- Gates Cambridge Scholar.

I had the immense privilege of working with Kiran to engage our disability community on impactful storytelling, and his insight, passion, and adoration for the art of storytelling was ever-present. His content expertise took our programming to the next level, and his ability to engage and empower others in their own journeys to storytelling is incredible to watch. Not only has his work ignited a fire for storytelling within my own work, but his mentorship has inspired both my professional and personal growth - Margaux Whitehead, Program Specialist, Public health Professional. Association of University Centers on Disability.
